The University of Rhode Island Women's Studies Program Presents:
The Fredrika Schweers Memorial Lecture on Women and Health

"Navigating the Birth Control Maze"

Wednesday, March 12, 2008
7:00 p.m.
Independence Hall Auditorium

Deb Erickson-Owens, RN, CNM

In 2008, there are more choices than ever available to women when making decisions about birth control. This abundance of choice can leave many women confused about what is best for them. "Navigating the birth control maze" highlights the current methods available and offers insight, education, and recommendations as a way to assist women in making more informed choices.

Deb Erickson-Owens is a seasoned nurse-midwife. For 20 years she has worked with women providing family planning and pregnancy care. She is a former director of the URI Nurse-Midwifery Program and currently practices in the Providence area.
