

The Center for the Humanities Presents:

Dwelling and Dwellings in the face of Modernity: On Merleau-Ponty and Heidegger

Prof. Duane Davis, University of North Carolina - Asheville

Monday, February 22, 2010

4:30-6:00

Lippitt Hall Auditorium, Rm 402

Duane H. Davis is Professor of Philosophy at the University of North Carolina – Asheville. He received his Ph.D. in philosophy from Pennsylvania State University and is a leading scholar on the philosophy of Maurice Merleau-Ponty. He is the author of Merleau-Ponty's Later Thought and its Practical Implications: The Debiscence of Responsibility (Prometheus, 2001).

Co-Sponsored by: URI Center for the Humanities, URI Department of Philosophy, and URI Department of English